THUE STOVE HAS TAKEN THE first premiums at every Fair where it has een exhibited. At the South-Western Indiana District Fair, held here October, 1859, there were but two premiums offered for cooking stores—one for the best wood cosking store, and one for the best coal cooking stove. The Economist took the FIRST PREMIUM FOR THE BEST | OOKING STOVE FOR WOOD. Roelker, Klusman & Co took the first premium for their cooking stove for coal. No other premiums were offered. The large silver medal was awarded to the Economist at the New York State

Sair; and the first premium at the United States Fair held at Chicage, and twelve other State and County Fairs in 1859.

In no branch of mechanical art has the been a more apparent advance than in the man-ufacture of stoves. It is but a few years since the very name was a novelty, representing a huge, shapeless structure, almost as devoid of inge, shapeless structure, almost as devoid of use as ornament. These have gradually given place to patterns of grace and utility; until the varieties our markets new present have almost exhausted the vecabulary of names; and the different phases the metal is made to assume, would astonish old Vuican him eff. In style and finish, the improvement has been real, leaving nothing to be desired on that regist, but the average connections in arise. on that point, but the severe competition in price, to which they have been subjected, has deprived them of many of the more substantial qualities desirable. This seems more especially to have been desirable. This seems more especially to have been the case in reference to cook stoves—an article of domestic economy that has more to do with scolding wives and crotchery servants than most people imagine. The public have long sought an improvement in this article, and we believe are ready to pay any reasonable price for a cooking stove, if it only possesses the merits of size, weight, convenience, durability, economy, and perfection of manufacture. These qualities seem to be possessed most fully in the friend mist—a new stove, perfected and brought out the past season, by Messrs. Treadwell, Perry 8 Norton, of Albany. We heard so much of this stove, and it looked so much like a stove intended for use, that we concluded to try them, and the result of the experiment convinces us that the proprieters, in their determination to make the best store is the world, have succeeded. We regard the Economist as possessing all the ments above enumerated—as the great stove of the day—far in advance of anything ever attempted in the line of vance of anything ever attempted in the line of stoves, perfect in all its appointments, and true to its name in durability and the use of fuel. Among its name in durability and the use of fuel. Among the many conveniences attached to it, may be mentioned a large over, with hooks arranged, for suspending meats while reasting. A copper water tank, helding from 12 to 25 gallous—warming closet, broiling hearth, de., de. The broiling hearth is one of the most noticeable features of this remarkable stove. There never has been, to our knowledge, any broiling axtute that was really satisfactory in its operation. The proprietors of this stove have been conducting a series of experiments upon broiling, eliciting some valuable facts, and resulting in the invention of a gridiron adapted to this stove, which has been secured by letters patent, and is one of the most admirable things of the kind we ever saw—broiling without smoks, and keeping the only agency in this city.

Thos. Scantlin's, No. 29 Main street, between First and Second.

The first premium was awarded to this Stove as the best coal or wood cooking stove at the South-western Indiana District Fair, held at this place. No stove ever devised combines as numerous or important scientific principles as this of Stewart's. It broils, boils, bakes and roasts at the same moment, without one dish imparting flavor to another, or producing that sameness of taste in meats and gravies, which, to the delicate and fastidious of taste, makes so insuperable an objection to every other cooking stove now in use. Notice is hereby given that, by virtus of five precepts, issued out of the Clerk's office of the City of Evansville, and to me directed, I will sell at public out-cry, at the door of the Conti-house, in the City of Fvansville, on Saturday, the 17th of March, 1800, the following lots or parcels of real estate, or ladicement is presented for its universal employment.

For 20 years Mr. Stewart has been employed in pertecting this stove, and since last February, he has obtained three new patents for improvements, which, in his opinion, and the opinion of all who have examined it, made it perfect. Within four have examined it, made it perfect. Within four years trendy thousand of them have been sold, under a full guarantee, and not one has been returned. These remarkable results have emboldened a host of store manufacturers to imitate the Stawart Store, but, save in exterior appearance, which the old patents (having expired) enables them to give, they no more recemble Stewart's than chalk does choose. These imitations are known by various names, but they are all deficient in various particulars, such as the air-tight boxes, by which full control is kept over the fire, and of the heat, by a draft damper, ingenicusly contrived, which also admits a constant current of cold air on the outside of the fire box, which again becomes heated air, and, passing into the oven, is made available for cooking paroses.
